Musings About Things Interesting To You and Me

(BY THE EDITOR)

If you have a friend who sends us his "political announcement" and it does not appear in this paper, we offer the following reason. As a sample of a morning's mail; we counted 28 typewritten pages of this sort of announcement and history of different candidates already in the field for office, and in the past week we do not exaggerate when we say we have had more than 150 typewritten pages of this sort of publicity. This would take up some six full pages of our paper without another item on them, then in addition are mats with some for making a picture of said candidate. These mats are for the purpose of making cuts or a picture of the party, which work alone should not be less than $1 for the cut made. With the announcement and mat is there rarely a dollar or hint of pay, therefore they are practically all being consigned to the waste basket, until such time as seekers of these favors learn that it takes money to set type, buy newspaper and ink, as well as pay rent, telephone, gas and electricity.

Business people, merchants, householders and local residents are warned at this time that rackets, formerly called confidence games, are now on the increase in coast cities, due to the influx of these people during the summer season, when they find it rather hot and uncomfortable in the inland places. A pair of these racketeers will drop into town and pick up $25, $50 or perhaps $100 in an afternoon on some fake advertising scheme, directory for auto camp, service stations, or other place where it is most questionable whether there will ever be any real returns. The Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce will help you spend your money where the advertising will do some good. The directors are men of experience and tell whether the local dailies or inland papers have brought the best results in former years and $1.00 properly spent will bring more returns than $50 given to the first stranger who asks for it.

After happenings of the past two weeks and the return of June Robles and William F. Gettle to their families we do not think the death penalty any too harsh for kidnappers. They have no consideration for their victims or the anguish caused those left behind. We hope to see the guilty ones punished to the full extent of the law. Since the foregoing was written the Gettle kidnappers have been given life sentences which we believe was not severe enough, but under the California law the limit the judge could give as the victim was not injured in any manner. June Robles was not injured either apparently and while the Arizona law may be different, the fiends who took and held her deserve being put away where they will be of no further risk to society.

It pays to patronize those who advertise in the Ocean Beach News. These dollars spent with local stores will soon return to your own purse.

City authorities have had our beaches cleaned up in very fine shape the last two Sundays. This is the way they should always be found.

Ocean Beach Of Other Days

(WINIFRED DAVIDSON)

THE OCEAN BEACH HOTEL

The magnificent hotel which was to have been the crowning achievement of the effort made in 1887 to boom this seaside resort, was actually erected, as everyone knows; but it did not cost the predicted $85,000, nor did it bring here the crowds of settlers and visitors which had been anticipated.

1887-88 is the date of the building of the Ocean Beach hotel; the exact day on which it was opened to the public I have not yet been able to discover. Carlson and Higgins were its builders and first owners. It was of frame construction, with a three-story octagonal tower towards the north, which was surmounted by an arched, balustraded and turreted lookout. The main portion of the hotel was a three-story, gable-roofed affair with a very deep balcony opening from the second story. South of this was a large octagonal addition, which was probably designed for a combination dining and ball room. This addition also was topped with a small octagonal lookout, and it was approached from the front by still another octagonal, pavilion-like porch. This porch extended northward across the entire front section and a part of the northern end of the building, which had the appearance of being an afterthought and formed an L with the main portion. This lean-to was one-story, and gable roofed. The general appearance of the Ocean Beach hotel as presented in the one extant picture which we have found reminds one of Hotel del Coronado, in fact; but on a very much reduced scale. Heald and Botsford at about the same time that this hotel was built erected one similar to it at La Jolla. There was still another at Del Mar, as well as others at Oceanside and Carlsbad. It seems that all suffered destruction at about the same time—which was some years after the great boom broke, strangely enough; when it seemed to all who had invested money in southern California real estate could never hope to recoup lost fortunes, big and little.

There was considerable gossip about the burning of the Ocean Beach hotel; gossip which amounted to something more. The fire occurred in 1894, after the best of the furniture, it was said, which was insured, had been safely removed. However, the owner who by this time was neither Carlson nor Higgins never collected; and this adventure in magnificence at Ocean Beach ended in total loss for everyone concerned.

For some time after the collapse of the boom campers coming to the beach for their annual outings often rented rooms in the old hotel; bringing their own bedding and light housekeeping arrangements, cooking their food in the hotel kitchen, and generally making themselves comfortable under its many roofs.

The photograph of the hotel which was given to the San Diego Historical society for preservation at the Junipero Serra Museum by Miss Agness Ellis of Ocean Beach, includes three four-horse carryalls and several smaller equipages and riders, in procession formation in front of the building. United States flags and other banners are displayed by some of the men in the first tallyho, and we learn that this was the occasion of one of the grandest of butchers' picnics. The somewhat dilapidated appearance of the hotel shows the picture to have been taken some years after its opening.

Beautiful and Rare Displays at Flower Show.

The Ocean Beach Flower Show held Saturday and Sunday was a very successful affair in its new setting at the civic center building at the foot of Santa Monica street. The octagon shaped building lent a fitting place for decorating and adornment. There were some 150 exhibitors with 400 exhibits of beautiful flowering plants and shrubs common to this section and the lateness of the season also made it possible for tropical plants and fruits to be shown.

The attendance was estimated at 2000 or more.

Outstanding displays were made by the Montalvo Gardens, showing begonias, ferns, etc. The Rosecroft Begonia Gardens of which Alfred D. and Annie C. Robinson are proprietors, this year had a large and beautiful display of fuchsias. A plant of rare and unusual beauty was a Sacred Lily of Africa in full bloom, shown by Mrs. G. R. Webber. This blossom was 14 to 15 in. long with a width about half the length.

Ocean Beach school exhibits took high first prize and low second prize. Point Loma girl scouts No. 1 and Ocean Beach boy scout troop 61 received awards.

Honorable mention was given the following entries:

Solanum Jasminoides, Mrs. H. J. Gravelle.
Salpiglossis, Mrs. W. H. Rabsahl.

Mission Beach Optimistic

The Mission Beach Booster and Business club met Tuesday evening at the Blue Lantern, the members being optimistic as to summer business. It was said that there would likely be a shortage of houses this summer as more than 50 percent of the rentals had been taken with deposits made to hold for the tenants. The officers wish to urge the attendance of all members, also residents and property owners, at the next meeting to be held the first Tuesday of June, at the Mission Beach Casino.

Capacity House Greeted Sinclair for Governor

Being unable to have a representative at the Upton Sinclair meeting in San Diego Monday evening we have been interested in reports of that meeting. From the San Diego Sun we think we have found the best report and pass the following gleanings on to our readers, taken from Tuesday's afternoon daily as follows:

The author and ex-Socialist told an overflow audience in the American Legion hall in Balboa Park last night what he would do and he was interrupted so much by applause that he had some difficulty in doing it.

One of the first things he would do, Sinclair said, is free Tom Mooney and that "brought the house down."

Twenty-two hundred chairs had been placed in the hall. All were filled and more than 50 persons stood. Outside, at least 200 more who could not get in listened to the speech thru an amplifier.

The crowd started cheering as soon as the Rev. Sanford B. Kurtz, pastor of Lemon Grove Congregational church opened the meeting. They kept it up when another minister, the Rev. Myron Insko, superintendent of the Good Will Industries here, arose to introduce Sinclair, and when Sinclair himself got up, the audience really "cut loose."

"I expect you want to know something about what we do with this money," said Sinclair. "Well, I'll tell you not only what we take in but about what we have turned down."

"We have taken in possibly $1,000 for expenses. We have turned down probably $100,000. You can see I'm no practical politician."

Sinclair said offers of large sums had come from the gambling interests in Los Angeles who wanted to be "left alone". Others, he said, had come from the rock, sand and gravel people who want business. More came from insurance men.

Sinclair said the headquarters of his campaign were in a former undertaking parlor, adding: "It may be significant, but I think it is where we are going to embalm the body of plutocratic government."

The novelist likened his campaign to a ball game in which the bases were as follows: First base, when he put out his book, second base, making the other candidates discuss the real issues. Third base, he said, will be nomination and home plate will be Sacramento.

"It's up to you," said Sinclair, in the words with which he ends his book, "I, Governor of California." Incidentally, he said this book had reached 180,000 copies.

A little later in the campaign, said the candidate, Sinclair candidates for the Assembly and the State Senate will be placed in the field.

If he is made governor the candidate said he would inform the people every day by radio what had happened. "If there are officers standing in your way, I'll tell you who they are and what to do about them."

Ocean Village Cafe To Open

Stephe Bradaric, proprietor of the Newport cafe, will on Saturday, May 19, open his second place of business in Ocean Beach, having leased the Ocean Village cafe for the summer.

On Sunday, May 20, as an inducement to patrons, a turkey dinner will be served complete for 50c.

M. E. CHURCH SERVICES

Sunday morning the pastor will speak on the topic "Christ and the New Deal." Special music will be rendered.

The Epworth League will meet at 7 o'clock. All young folks will be welcome at this service.

Wednesday at 6:30 the members and friends of the church will meet for a pot luck supper, followed by the fourth quarterly conference. Dr. J. A. Grissenger superintendent of the San Diego district will preside and give an address. This is the most important meeting of the church year and a large attendance is expected.

Chamber of Commerce Receiving Inquiries

Much business of importance was transacted at Monday evening's meeting of the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce.

The secretary was instructed to write letters to proper authorities thanking them for the thorough manner in which they are cleaning up our beach.

Commander Steele of the American Legion reported 236 persons receiving food relief at the three beaches and Point Loma, thru his office here.

A letter from Mrs. Florence Kellogg in regard to trash in park at Sunset Cliffs was read and will be forwarded to the park department with recommendations of other work to be done in the same section.

A committee of E. E. Steele, Joe Lowmes and H. J. Thomas was appointed to inquire into the feasibility of a community dance on the street for summer visitors and home folks, about the 4th of July.

Recommendation made to city council that we stand shoulder to shoulder with Mission Beach in asking that the city of San Diego or State of California accept and operate Mission Beach area and bathing center.

Mrs. Albert Dumont was appointed by the board to collect dues of the organization for 1934, as well as solicit new members.

Several letters were read from prospective visitors at the beach this summer who had asked information in regard to houses, music instruction for their children, and for other information; all of which had been supplied.

Says Business Will Become Specialized Profession

American business of the future will attain the status of a profession, with a strong code of ethics and with success dependent in large measure on administrative ability and efficiency in serving the public.

This is the opinion of Prof. Theodore J. Kreps of the Graduate School of Business of Stanford University, set forth in an address on "The Business Man of 1964," delivered as a guide to contestants in Bank of America's essay contest. The contestants, of 18 years of age and under are competing for $10,000 in scholarships and cash awards by writing their views on "The World of 1964."

"We now know that business is complicated and that the directors of our gigantic businesses need to be as carefully selected as are our doctors and our teachers," said Professor Kreps.

"The businessman of 1964 will not be able to go into a business merely because his father owns it. He will have to meet professional requirements. Let me use an analogy: Suppose we permitted anyone to run an airplane who either could buy one or borrow enough money to buy one.

"Suppose we allowed him to use high pressure methods of advertising and permitted him to cut rates in order to entice passengers to ride with him. Would it astonish you, then, if the number of crashes were large? Obviously not! Yet isn't that exactly what we have done in the past with our highly complicated businesses?"

"In 1964, business will be more stable, for it will be based on three pillars—economic efficiency, social justice and individual liberty. The road to the top in business in 1964 will be open to everyone who has gone thru the highly complicated training necessary to run our highly complicated machines. It will be open only to those who are economically efficient, socially minded and genuinely free."

Ellsworth Whalen took on a little too much sunshine this week and as a result was unable to contribute his column "Americana." In our next issue, we suppose, there will be a warning to others not to let Old Sol shine on your body too long, especially newcomers at the beach.

New Peter B. Kyne Serial Starts Next Week

Starting next Friday, May 25th, our new serial "Outlaws of Eden" by the well known and popular author Peter B. Kyne, will appear in the Ocean Beach News regularly in five-column installments.

This new story is a western romance of today, full of color and action. In it you will find a vivid word picture of a spirited girl who drove evil from her mountain paradise. She and a young man take the law into their own hands. They end the feud that had existed between their families for seventy years.

Peter B. Kyne, one of America's greatest writers, knows the west in city and country. It is a delight to read his interest holding stories.

Code of the North is concluded in this issue, May 18th.

Loma Alta Section Benefits From Street Extension

Loma Alta section of Ocean Beach is now rapidly forging to the front since the extension of W. Point Loma Blvd., which has been smoothed into a fine street and it is reported will soon receive a coat of oil to hold down the dust until such time as it can be paved.

Other streets of that section are being connected up and much grading and improving done, some water mains being extended and Loma Alta folks are happy over this good improvement which brings them to Ocean Beach or San Diego in the shortest possible time over a fine highway.

Vacation Number Advertising Sold Readily To Live People

The editor of the Ocean Beach News is grateful to the advertisers of our last week's vacation number which made it gratifying in a financial way and a pleasure to do the work necessary in sending to a list of some 4500 or more people in Imperial valley, Yuma and Somerton as well as other points in Arizona, where they are expected to lend those people a choice in the place where they might spend a pleasant summer's vacation.

The Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce and the live Mission Beach Booster and Business Club gave financial and moral support and we trust the returns will justify their interest in this issue.

DANCE AND CARD PARTY SATURDAY NIGHT

A dance and card party will be held this Saturday evening, May 19, at Point Loma Masonic hall, under auspices of the Point Loma chapter O.E.S. No. 490.

The public is cordially invited to this May dance and card party.

SUPERVISORS TOLD WIDOWS NOT GIVEN EXEMPTIONS

(San Diego Sun)
The Board of Supervisors today directed the district attorney to investigate the claim of F. B. McElwee of 4408 Brighton avenue, Ocean Beach, that the assessor is compelling scores of widows to pay taxes by refusing to allow them householders' exemptions.

McElwee vigorously protested the assessor's request for two additional men for his seizure squad.

The supervisors also asked the district attorney to define who are entitled to householders' exemptions

President Shows Confidence in Tugwell by Promoting Him—High Tax Senators Win a Victory—National Milk Control Program Withdrawn.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S reply to the attacks on Rexford Guy Tugwell, which were renewed by opponents of the administration after the

R. G. Tugwell

Wirt story was made public, comes in the form of promotion for the head of the brain trust. He has been serving as assistant secretary of agriculture, and is now advanced by the President to the newly created position of undersecretary of agriculture, his salary being increased from $7,500 to $10,000 a year. A new assistant secretary can now be appointed who will relieve Mr. Wallace and Mr. Tugwell of some of their heavy duties. The department has been considered understaffed. The post of undersecretary was created by a recent act of congress.

Tugwell's appointment will have to be confirmed by the senate, and it was considered certain the Republicans would take advantage of the opportunity to make fresh attacks on him and his theories of government.

The President also advanced Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, a Boston banker, from assistant secretary to undersecretary of the treasury, which position had been vacant since Raymond Moley stepped out. The higher personnel of that department is now being placed on a permanent basis for the first time since Henry Morgenthau, Jr., became its head.

MEMBERS of the American Society of Newspaper Editors assembled in Washington heard a warm and elaborate defense of the New Deal delivered by Professor Tugwell, who is in part responsible for most of the recovery measures adopted by the present administration. Denying that those who are advising the President seek to bring about radical changes in the life and economic policies of the American people, Professor Tugwell described himself as a "thorough conservative."

"We have a saving irreverence of authority," said Professor Tugwell in speaking of the characteristics of the American people, "which gets us out of holes. These basic traits determine the structure of our laws and of our government. No one, with the slightest sense of history, would try to fit such a people into a regimented scheme, would try to think for them instead of getting them to think for themselves."

"The New Deal is not something which can establish itself in the mind of a dictator or a small governing group. That was the fatal theory of the system from which we are turning away. Its base has to be as broad as the economy which has to be brought under control and as deep as the minds and the hearts of the people whom it affects."

VICTORY in the conference was won by the senate high tax bloc, for the house conferees accepted virtually all the senate increases in estate and gift taxes, the capital stock and excess profits taxes and liberal compromises over income-tax publicity and consolidated returns.

The conference agreement was complete except for the Couzens amendment, adding 10 per cent to all individual income-tax returns next year. The house will take a separate vote on this, and it was believed the senate would not insist on it if it were rejected by the house.

With the revenue bill thus disposed of, the senate finance committee began public hearings on the administration's reciprocal tariff bill, which the house has passed.

SENATORS who urge the remonetization of silver held a conference with President Roosevelt but received from him no encouragement for silver legislation, though no conclusion was reached. The possibility of silver purchases was discussed and the President indicated a disposition to give this matter consideration, but on the whole there was no indication the government will embark on such a policy.

The silver senators were not at all satisfied with the President's attitude and held a meeting at which eight voted to support mandatory legislation for the benefit of silver.

Later it was reliably stated that the President was maturing a plan for international stabilization of currencies and that silver figures prominently in it. Mr. Roosevelt, it was revealed, favors the inclusion of silver in the metal base of currency issues to the extent of 30 per cent, the remaining 70 per cent to be gold. This change can be safely made, however, the President points out, only by international agreement whereby all the signatory nations would admit silver to their reserves against which paper money is issued.

In the London economic and monetary conference Senator Key Pittman offered such a plan, proposing that central banks keep 20 per cent, or one-fifth, of their metal cover or reserve for currency in silver. The proposal was not acted on at the conference.

CHESTER C. DAVIS, head of the Farm Adjustment administration, announced that the national milk control program designed to help dairy farmers had been withdrawn "because we do not feel that it has sufficient support from the farmers." If sentiment changes it may be revived later, but for the present, only minor features are to be carried out. These include dairy purchases for relief purposes and reduction in the number of diseased cattle.

The program, worked out after months of study and argument, called for benefit payments of from $165,000,000 to $300,000,000 to dairymen who joined in the plan. In return, the producers were to reduce their milk flow 10 per cent below the peak months of the 1932-1933 period.

As in the case of other farm programs, the funds for benefit payments were to come from a processing tax. This was to be one cent a pound on butterfat and the figure was to be raised gradually to five cents a pound.

A statement issued by the farm administration said the milk decision "is in accord with the administration's fixed policy to attempt no adjustment program which does not have the support of a substantial majority of those engaged in the industry."

CUBA asked for the extradition of Gerardo Machado, deposed president of the island republic, so a general police alarm was sent out from Washington for his arrest. United States marshals went first to the apartment he had been occupying in New York, and were told by his secretary, Julio Fernandez, that he had left for parts unknown. Federal port authorities and border officials were told to watch for the fugitive. If they can get him back, the Cuban authorities intend to try Machado on charges of murder based on wholesale shootings which occurred a few days before he fled from the island.

They also plan to ask extradition of Gen. Alberto Herrera, Machado's former chief of staff, who like his master took refuge in the United States.

Machado has lived in seclusion with members of his family in the Bahamas, Canada and this country since his flight from Cuba. He established his New York residence about six months ago.

WITH unexpected celerity the railway executives and rail union chiefs reached an accord in the wage dispute, and the danger of a strike was averted for another year. At the instance of President Roosevelt but without government interference they worked out their own settlement after the federal negotiators had failed to get results and Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman had withdrawn as mediator.

Under the arrangement decided upon the 10 per cent wage cut which has prevailed in the railroads during the last two years is to be gradually wiped out in the next twelve months. Two and a half per cent of the existing wage cut is to be restored July 1, another 2½ per cent on January 1, and the remaining 5 per cent on April 1, 1935.

In other words, instead of a 10 per cent cut rail workers will have only a 7½ per cent cut prevailing between July 1 and January 1, a 5 per cent cut prevailing between January 1 and April 1, and full pay restoration after April 1.

These terms worked out by the employers and employees are actually more favorable to the workers than the terms which President Roosevelt twice asked them to accept.

When informed of the settlement, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I am very glad that the railroads and their employees have been able to settle their wage dispute by mutual agreement. The country should be, and will be, grateful to them for this disposition of what might have developed into a troublesome controversy. I congratulate both sides on the wisdom and restraint which they have exhibited. They have set a good example."

OSCAR DE PRIEST, negro congressman from Chicago, won a victory in his fight to remove the house restaurant bar against members of his race. He obtained adoption of his resolution for investigation of the right of Lindsay Warren of North Carolina to fix the rules and regulations for the restaurant—which of course doesn't mean that negroes will be served in that dining room. The vote was 237 to 114, and the balloting followed the Mason and Dixon line almost without exception.

Mr. De Priest showed his wisdom when he learned that some Communist organizations were planning to take advantage of the occasion by staging a demonstration against "Jim Crowism." He said no friend of his would take part in this.

OPEN hearings will begin May 2 by the senate committee on privileges and elections on petitions for the removal from office of Huey P. Long, senator from Louisiana. Walter P. George of Georgia gave out notice that "only charges sufficient in substance and form" and which were not considered by the special campaign expenditures committee last year would be investigated. Notices were sent to Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, Mrs. Ruffin G. Pleasant and former Governor of Louisiana John M. Parker, all of whom have filed petitions seeking removal of the "kingfish."

In the run-off Democratic primary in the Sixth Louisiana district to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Bolivar E. Kemp, Senator Long's candidate, Harry D. Wilson, was decisively beaten by Jared Y. Sanders. Nomination in the primary is equivalent to election.

JOHN DILLINGER, the notorious outlaw, and several members of his gang fought their way out of a trap laid by federal agents and posmen ten miles east of Manitowish, in northern Wisconsin. In three desperate gun battles three men were killed and eight wounded, and the bandits escaped into the woods. Three women who had been with the Dillinger gang were arrested. Two others were believed to have fled with the desperadoes. These two came from Minneapolis and were thought to have warned Dillinger of the impending raid on the camp where he had been for several days.

Some hours after the battles in Wisconsin three members of the gang were seen by three deputy sheriffs in a suburb of St. Paul, Minn. A running gun fight ensued and one of the gangsters apparently was wounded, but the trio escaped and stole an automobile in which they headed for the bridge across the Mississippi river.

Federal and local officials throughout all that region were on the lookout for the Dillinger gang with the tacit understanding that the desperadoes would be shot on sight.

AMERICAN Federation of Labor chiefs have begun a drive to unionize the telephone workers of the country. They charge the American Telephone and Telegraph company is violating the NRA laws through its company unions. It is also asserted that financiers are buying up small telephone companies in the Middle West and Chicago and at unreasonable prices and then forcing the stock on their employees at fat profits for themselves.

Besides demanding that stock sales to employees be outlawed under the pending NRA code for the telephone industry, the A. F. of L. workers told Deputy Administrator L. H. Peoples that the NRA should force the telephone companies to stop expansion of dial telephone systems until such a time as employment conditions become normal.

OFFICIALS of the Department of Agriculture believe the wheat carry-over into 1935 may amount to 340,000,000 bushels, and are studying the export markets to find a possible outlet for part of it. But they cannot develop an export policy until the work of the international wheat conference at Rome is completed.

The wheat carry-over on July 1 this year is expected to be about 265,000,000 bushels, to which may be added 75,000,000 bushels surplus from this year's prospective crop of 700,000,000 bushels.

Secretary Wallace has suggested that processing taxes on wheat might be increased and that the amount of the tax earmarked to promote exports might be raised from 2 to 4 or even 5 cents.

A 5-cent tax on the 400,000,000 bushels yearly processing of taxable wheat would return approximately $20,000,000, compared with the $7,000,000 to be spent in exporting wheat this year.

This total would be sufficient to export about the 90,000,000-bushel quota given the United States under the international agreement on the basis of the differential of 22½ cents between the domestic and world prices.

PASSAGE through the Panama canal of the American fleet of 111 vessels, on the way from the Pacific to the Atlantic, was carried out successfully, but not in the hoped-for 24 hours. The time consumed was almost double that, which led the Tokyo press to declare the movement was a "failure."

IN AN extemporaneous address at an exhibition in connection with the federal subsistence homestead projects, Mr. Roosevelt answered various critics of his administration with the declaration that the New Deal is a program of evolution, not revolution. Praising the homestead system as one of the administration's foremost achievements in helping depression-stricken families to gain a fresh start in life, Mr. Roosevelt denied charges that the program contemplated "regimentation" of great numbers of people.

"There is no regimentation," the President said. "We are not going to take people by force from one community and put them in another."

In the long run, he said, the subsistence homesteads will cost the government less than it would cost to keep these families on direct relief.

"We will work out a system for those families, brain trust or otherwise, in an effort to discover new things for communities to do," he said.

Site of the Grand Coulee Project on the Columbia

MORE than 4,000 men will be given jobs on the Grand Coulee project on the Columbia river in the state of Washington. This power development project which has been described as "the Muscle Shoals of the Northwest" is being built and will be operated by the federal government. The Public Works administration has made an allotment of $15,000,000 to the bureau of reclamation, Department of the Interior, to carry the work forward. The dam and power plant will cost about $63,000,000. The picture shows a portion of the east excavation. The dam will create a lake in the river 50 miles long. It will be built to a height of 335 feet. It is proposed to install eight generating units with a capacity of 700,000 horsepower.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE SQUEAKY VOICE

"WHO'S that?" Peter Rabbit pricked up his ears and stared up at the tops of the trees in the Old Orchard.

Instantly Jenny Wren popped her head out of her doorway. She cocked her head one side to listen, then looked down at Peter. "I don't hear any strange voice," she snapped. "The way you are staring, Peter Rabbit, one would think you were hearing something new and worth while."

Just then there were two or three sharp, squeaky notes from the top of one of the trees. "There!" cried Peter. "There! Didn't you hear that, Jenny Wren?"

"For goodness sake, Peter Rabbit, you don't mean to say that you don't know whose voice that is?" cried Jenny. "That's Rosebreast. I didn't suppose there was anyone who didn't know that sharp, squeaky voice. It rather gets on my nerves. What anybody wants to squeak like that for when he can sing as Rosebreast can, is more than I can understand."

At that very instant Mr. Wren began to scold as only he and Jenny can. Peter looked up at Jenny and winked slyly. "And what anyone

Mother's Cook Book

NEW DISHES

WITH macaroni, spaghetti and noodles pushing themselves into our menus from soup to dessert, we are obliged to note some new ways of serving these most wholesome foods, if we keep up to date.

Spaghetti Alaska.

Cook one-half pound of spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Drain, cut into pieces and chill. Remove the bones and skin from a large can of salmon and shred into fine pieces. Add one teaspoon of grated onion, one tablespoon of lemon juice, one-half cup of chopped celery and season to taste with salt. Pour boiling water over a package of lemon gelatin, using one cup of water, stir until dissolved, then add three-fourths of a cup of cold water and set aside to thicken. Mix one-third of a cup of mayonnaise with the salmon and gelatin and pour into a mold and chill. Whip one cup of cream until stiff, add two tablespoons of vinegar, salt and paprika and the cooked spaghetti. Unmold the salad and serve on a bed of lettuce with the spaghetti and cream in a ring around it. Sprinkle with paprika.

Fried Macaroni Slices.

For variety this makes a most tasty breakfast dish, served with broiled slices of bacon. Cook one-half pound of macaroni in salted water until tender. Drain and blanch, add two beaten eggs, one-half teaspoon of salt and one-half cup of milk. Press into a greased pan and bake in a hot oven for an hour. When cold unmold, slice and fry a golden brown.

Spaghetti Muffins.

Cook two ounces of spaghetti until tender, drain and cut into half-inch pieces. There should be three-fourths of a cup. Sift one-fourth of a cup of sugar, one teaspoon of salt, five teaspoons of baking powder and two cups of flour. Mix spaghetti with one beaten egg, three tablespoons of melted butter and one cupful of milk. Add the liquids to the dry ingredients and beat well. Bake in greased muffin pans in a hot oven for 30 minutes.

Honey Bee's Nativity

The Bee laboratory says that the common honey bee was not native to this continent, and that it was first introduced into the United States in Massachusetts between 1638 and 1640. Reports of the introduction of apiculture into the Southwest by the Spaniards earlier than these dates have never been verified.

Mighty Rock and Mighty Thoroughbreds

EVEN the mighty rock of Gibraltar cannot put the ever popular sport of horse racing in the shade. The quaintly situated course where weekly meets are held is well known to men of the British navy, who patrol the track whenever they get the opportunity.

Sheep in the Rain

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE sheep on the hillside are caught in the rain. Like us they are powerless under its beat.

We push on the starter and struggle in vain

To climb the tall hill where the two roadways meet.

The car and its master, impatient and worn.

Seem helpless as sheep, and almost as forlorn.

But soon we will be at the top of the hill,

And the sheep without shelter will face the storm still.

Resigned to their fate, with a patience as vast

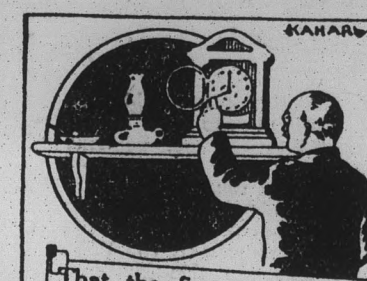

As the world, they will wait till the tempest is past.

They are wiser than we, for they know—the storm done—

Their Shepherd will send them his blessing—the Sun!

Women Begin to Figure in Role of Stowaways

When the ship's captain asks the stowaway, "What's the big idea?" he usually gets a story in reply.

Women, as well as men, are sometimes found as stowaways. One of the strangest and most romantic cases came to light when the famous windjammer, the Herzogin Cecille, under Captain DeCloux, won a 14,000 miles sailing match against the Beatrice from Australia to England.

A young Adelaide music teacher, Miss Jeanne Day, wanted to sail on the Herzogin Cecille. She had her hair cut short like a boy's and bought, one piece at a time, a complete boy's outfit. Then one evening she went for a swim from a lonely beach, and came back dressed as a boy.

But she was turned back when she tried to board the windjammer at the wharf. So she waited till it was towed out and anchored, ready to sail, in the bay. Then she hid herself under some nets in a fishing boat, and lay low until night, when she rolled out, pretending to be drunk, and saying thickly "Herzogin Cecille."

The fishing boat was then out in the bay, not far from the sailing ship, and the fisherman, completely deceived, rowed her over. She climbed up a ship's ladder unobserved, and hid in the hold until she knew the vessel was safely at sea, and she couldn't hold on without food and water any longer. Then she walked up on deck, declared herself, and was signed on as cabin-boy. Throughout the voyage round the Horn she took her full share of the work.

Only last year, another girl, the daughter of a former president of San Salvador, also disguised herself as a boy, and was stowed away, first on board a small fishing boat which took her from England to France, and then on a ship bound for Lisbon.

It was only a severe storm in the Bay of Biscay that forced her to leave her hiding place and so led to her discovery.

Laugh Tells Character

Better watch that laugh from now on or people may read your character from it just the same as chirographers read it from your handwriting or astrologers read it from the stars. Dr. George C. Williams, former president of Ithaca college, says the horse laugh with a broad "a" denotes an eccentric and sometimes vicious temperament. A long "e" is feminine sound and a short "e" reveals sarcasm. A normal and healthy person laughs with the Italian sound of the "a" clearly perceptible.—Pathfinder Magazine.

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pinny skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin.

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

A RESERVOIR OF PLENTY

The American cornucopia, the horn of plenty was never more full and running over than it is today. There is everything in abundance for feeding and growing fat; we have resources at our command for sustenance and body building with a sufficiency for drawing upon to meet almost any physical emergency. We are exalted to the very pinnacle of plenty and to spare, and the United States of America, who is no exception to the rule, has ever known or perhaps never will know what the ordeal of a formidable famine and starvation is like; that is, all those who are fortunate enough to never have drank the dregs of poverty. Poverty is not always starvation, however, but almost its neighbor, especially in the congested tenement districts of the over-populated cities.

Yes, we are a reservoir of plenty, but there is a strange mystery back of it all. Plenty and to spare with nothing wherewith to buy. The dollars are just about as plentiful as our products and resources, but like a running stream, with its waters dammed, we have a lake of precious water that no one can reach. Below the dam is only the scant seepage drawn from the river banks and floor.

If people are starving it is not because of a scarcity of food; it is the lack of money with which to buy. Out of work because there is no money to employ him on the job. With no job, industry stops; with no industry, nothing to sell. What is most imperative is to break the dam and let the water take its natural course. Then the job will return and the grocer will get paid; with his credit restored at the wholesale house he buys more goods and that makes a demand on the factory for more manufacturing.

In this generation of achievement there should be no financial crisis in such a land of liberty as ours. There is no time for political preferment in a time like this. If only a few money barons can control our currency to their liking, it is time the "New Deal" was taking a hand putting over also the "square deal."

The sanctity of the dollar and its legitimate circulation was never more needed than this year, now! Let us elect men who will work to protect the people instead of trying to hold their job.

What is most needed is that the economist and the government itself attack the problem of how to utilize the enormous wealth of production brought about by the ingenuity of the physicist and to distribute it equitably among the people.

This is positively getting to be a paramount radio nation with its 585 radio stations, carrying news and entertainment over the air to millions of people. But the way we are advancing along scientific lines, is more wonderful than radio invention itself. The climax and genius of transmitting on the air is found in the inauguration of the telephotograph service giving news by picture. Some 25 cities will be equipped in a few months with these phenomenal machines. The quality of the transmitted photograph is so nearly perfect as to defy detection in many instances, from the original photograph itself—an achievement hitherto thought impossible. An expenditure of 24 million dollars goes into featuring radio news, yearly, which means an approximate $65,750 daily. This is something to think about in modern advancement.

"Politics make strange bedfellows." This has long been a rather grotesque political truth, and describes the tactics of a professional politician who concedes that he is never too old to learn in the realm of politics. As the political pot starts boiling for the summer and fall campaign, the election-tree is laden with fruit-candidates growing on every bending branch. If politics could be looked upon as a Golden Rule principle instead of personal and business aggrandizement—we would soon be back to the basic principles so sacred in the Jeffersonian days. But is it too late, yet?

California is rapidly reclaiming her arid acres: when the Colorado aqueduct is completed the grandeur of green foliage will be one continuous blossom. Then we will look back upon the time when thirty years ago the Imperial Valley was a veritable desert without an oasis; a merciless sun beat incessantly down upon rock-strewn wastes upon, which blossomed cacti and mesquite. Today Imperial Valley thrives with agriculture and industry and is recognized as one of the world's most important shipping centers of fruits and vegetables. What is true of this great valley, is also true of many reclaimed sections of the Golden State.

The masses of humanity are joining the cantaloupe procession, while the delectable and flavor-meated golden balls become more plentiful and cheaper in price. All those who lack the necessary ash in their blood, to balance their health, need not be too deeply concerned over the physician's perscription, if they know the medicinal value of cantaloupes. Over 27,900 acres in Imperial Valley are said to be yielding the best and most prolific specimens ever harvested. This speaks well for this year, but last year the acreage was 35,500 and two years ago Imperial Valley grew and harvested 45,750 acres of cantaloupes. There always seems to be a market for all that can

Next week, on the 22nd of this month the Nation celebrates Maritime Day. This may be just another day on the calendar with most of us, but there is a significance connected with it, however, since it was 115 years ago, the 22nd of May, 1819, that the first steamship voyage was made across the Atlantic ocean, cutting her mooring at Savannah, Ga., and making an uncharted though successful voyage. The vessel christened the "City of Savannah" was a 350-ton steam-propeller, built by Francis Pickett in 1818 and Capt. Moses Rogers distinguished himself by making the voyage. Full of dignity and pride he arrived at Cork, Ireland, after an eventful 29-days and 11-hour voyage from Savannah, Ga. It was a rare historical feat and the beginning of ocean freight development on a scientific commercial basis. This is why we celebrate Maritime Day.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

"As we have borne the image of the earth, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." These words of Paul's to the Corinthians are the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "Mortals and Immortals" on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

One of the Bible selections in the Lesson-Sermon includes these verses from Paul's epistle to the Ephesians: "This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind. . . . That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness."

A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states, "When we learn in Science how to be perfect even as our Father in heaven is perfect, thought is turned into new and healthy channels, towards the contemplation of things immortal and away from materiality to the Principle of the universe, including harmonious man."

GOOD WILL BUSINESS INCREASES 56 PERCENT

The monthly report of the superintendent of the San Diego county Goodwill Industries, covering April, just submitted to the board of directors, shows a remarkable increase in the activities of that organization. The salvage materials collected by the Goodwill trucks increased 56 percent, as compared with April 1933, and the cash wages paid during the month showed an increase of 98 percent. Twenty-nine persons were employed daily, on an average, thruout the month. The aim of the Goodwill originally was to furnish self-respecting employment only to aged and other physically handicapped workers, and as far as possible this aim is adhered to.

More than 3000 thrifty customers made purchases in the Goodwill store during the month, furnishing the cash with which to pay the workers. Mr. Insko states that 99.5 cents of every dollar received were spent in San Diego, making the local Goodwill branch though one of the 88 thruout the country, a truly home institution.

All interested in modern social service methods are cordially invited to inspect what is being done at the local Goodwill plant, corner of Fifth avenue and J street

Point Loma High School

Point Loma Hi-lights, the all school show, will be held in the school auditorium, Thursday and Friday, May 24 and 25. Students taking part are from the music department directed by Mrs. Frances Thorkelson and Myron Green; the physical education department by Mrs. Eleanor Dixon and Laurence Purdy; the drama department by W. E. Shepherd.

The first scene will present a review of the beach party held annually by the music department. Operatic numbers will be heard as well as old popular favorites.

A burlesque on "The Tragedy of Julius Caesar" set to modern music, will be offered by the Boys' Glee club. Who, from this selected group of young men, will be the beautiful soprano, Calpurnia, is the burning question of the hour.

The second division, girls from physical education classes of Mrs. Dixon will interpret sailor, Portuguese, Spanish, and Indian dances. Members from the boys' physical education department will present acrobatic numbers.

Drama department students will offer two plays: from the junior high students, a comedy revealing all the difficulties of a movie company on location near Point Loma. Senior high students will present a gruesome mystery. A pair of hideous green hands will dart in and about spectators in the auditorium and lurk in the dark corners of the stage. If the situation becomes too terrifying, auditorium lights can be turned on at any time.

Stage-craft classes under Mr. Shepherd's direction are designing and constructing the stage sets to be used in the production. The sets will include a beach scene and a Roman scene for the Glee clubs, and Portuguese, Spanish and Indian sets for the physical education department, in addition to a ship scene for the Sailor's Hornpipe ensemble. Sets have been designed for the comedy and the thriller to be presented by the drama classes. The metal shop will make cymbals to be used in one of the dances.

Point Loma "Hi-lights" is promising to be one of the school's finest performances. Everyone who can possibly attend will not miss it. Remember the dates, May 24 and 25.

The Physics class of Point Loma went on a week end trip to Mount Wilson. A few of the many very interesting things that the class saw were the sixty-inch telescope, the one hundred-inch telescope, and the sun telescope. The class also visited the museum where they saw many pictures of the stars and the planets and also globes representing the relative sizes of the planets. The students had a good time on the trip and also learned a great deal about astronomy.

LOCAL KIWANIAN TALKS AT NATIONAL CITY

An interclub meeting was held Wednesday at National City with Wilbur Bradley of that club being chairman.

Dr. I. W. Parks of the Ocean Beach club had charge of the program with Dr. F. R. Felt as his speaker. Dr. Felt has lived at Jubbelpore, India, for over thirty years and gave a very interesting talk of the customs and rites of the different castes of that country.

Eleven members of the Ocean Beach club journeyed south and enjoyed the meeting with our neighbors. R. W. Chadwick was a guest of Bill Cords.

There will be no meeting here next Wednesday, but another interclub meeting will be held Tuesday, May 22, with San Diego.

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Rev. W. S. Dunn will be the speaker in the morning service, his sermon subject will be "The Source of Joy." The young people's society will meet at 6:30 p. m. Charles Settle will lead in the discussion period. At 7:30 there will be a 15 minute singing of the old hymns, followed with an address by the pastor "A Brave Girl's Romance."

You will find a friendly, helpful spirit in the meetings of this church. Do not fail to attend.

The monthly meeting of the Mission circle of the Baptist church will be held in the church parlor, Friday of this week, at 2 p. m. Mrs. W. S. Dunn will preside and reports of the recent state convention held at Riverside will be made by the delegates. The members are urged to be present.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

An interested audience, who by their questions received later, proved themselves to be earnest students of the Theosophical teachings, listened to a forum-lecture on "The Common Sense About Reincarnation," which was delivered by La Fayette Plummer last Sunday afternoon in the Temple of Peace. The speaker defined reincarnation as a series of successive lives on earth in human form, for the purpose of gaining experience for the inner man—the man of mind united to spirit—the ultimate goal being perfection. The common-sense and logic of the doctrine was emphasized by contrasting it with some of the now practically moribund materialistic dogmas of the past, such as that of a special creation, and the theory that all men are born in sin. Mr. Plummer continued to interpret the statement attributed to Jesus, i. e. that the Kingdom of Heaven is within us, by pointing out that no self-respecting man is willing to spend an eternity in inactivity, however pleasant, and therefore, it is but logical to believe, that he will find his Heaven by engaging in work that requires skill and enterprise, and energy, work that brings growth and consummation of the highest hopes in man, directed by the power of his own will. This work takes place in the repeated lives passed on this earth with intervening intervals of rest.

The monthly meeting of teachers and parents interested in lotus-circle work was held in the rotunda of the academy building during the hour preceding the forum-lecture. Dr. Gertrude van Pelt, national superintendent of lotus circles, (Theosophical Sunday schools), presided and the meeting brought to light many practical suggestions towards bringing into the lives of the young, a love of the beautiful, and a sense of responsibility and thought for others. A similar gathering will be held on the afternoon of the last Sunday in June, subject to change, which will be announced in the local press.

Preparations are a-foot for the conducting of a lotus-circle institute to be held on Point Loma in July.

"Theosophy In Our Changing World" will be the subject of the forum-lecture to be delivered in the Theosophical Temple on Point Loma by Lucien B. Copeland next Sunday, May 20th at 3 o'clock. All are welcome.

Warren-Walker School News

Many of the original stories and poems written by the students in the primary grades of the Warren-Walker during their free time are indicative of their interests and show their innate capabilities. The following stories were written by Freddie Kraft age 7 and Lois Eby, age 6.

The King Goes Hunting.

In a little town named Castle there lived a king.

The king liked to go hunting night and day. One night he said, "I'm going hunting tonight."

It was a stormy night. The deer were out but he had no luck and came back without any game.

The next night he went hunting again and he saw an animal he had never seen before. He threw eight spears and fired eight shots. It was a black panther. He killed it and came back to the little town of Castle a very happy king.

—Freddie Kraft.

Little Mary.

Once upon a time Mary was left at home while her mother went to the store. After her mother got away Mary sat down to read a book. While she was sitting there she heard a knocking at the door. Then she said to herself, "Dear me! Come in!, but the knocking kept on.

"I wonder what it is," she said as she went to the door. She looked out but she saw no one.

Mary said, "I wonder who that was."

The riddle was—the wind.

—Lois Eby.

Peter Pinney returned to school last Monday after an absence due to illness.

Betty Bryan and Patricia Welch, regular students in school have been enrolled for the summer session of the Warren-Walker school.

EVOLUTION

The knowledge of evolution which science has so far accumulated leads to four natural inferences. One is that man is immortal. Another that he has, like all creatures, slowly evolved to what he now is. A third is that both life and the forms it uses are evolving together; and fourth is that lower orders evolve into higher and continually higher ones. The human soul evolves from the savage to the saint—from animal instincts to the self-sacrifice of martyrs and heroes.

We can not escape the conclusion that the race has evolved, is evolving and will continue to evolve. The

AMERICA IN 1964?

The New Deal And Greater Business Opportunities Ahead

Dean Hutchison of California Discusses the Problems of the Farmer 30 years From Now

The last government census of the United States valued the land in farms in California at more than two billion seven hundred million dollars—a gain of 383% in value over the preceding thirty year period. Agriculture is the basis of California's present day wealth, it supports the cities and definitely ties together California's metropolitan and rural life.

Dean Hutchison

What has the future in store for California's agriculture? Will it continue as the state's major industry? Will distribution problems be solved? Will transportation be developed to the extent that today's Western harvest will be tomorrow's Eastern market? These questions and many others of vital interest to all Californians were discussed by Dean Claude B. Hutchison of the College of Agriculture, University of California, in connection with Bank of America's $10,000 Scholarship Contest, open to boys and girls, under 18 years of age, who write the best essays on "America in 1964."

Dean Hutchison's discussion was broadcast over the Columbia Don Lee Network at 8 P. M., Wednesday, May 2, 1934.

In 1934, the Dean points out, we are producing more food than people can buy. The government is taking 40,000,000 acres of land out of production this year through the subsidy. In a few instances, this is meeting the season's problems.

He further points out that this productive land can not be left idle for an indefinite period. But the government has a plan for adjusting this situation in its long time program.

"What effect will the NRA, a managed currency, the new securities act have upon business thirty years hence?"

Dr. Theodore J. Kreps of the Graduate School of Business, Stanford University, will give his views upon this vital, absorbing question on Wednesday evening, May 9, in connection with Bank of America's $10,000 essay contest. Dr. Kreps will be heard in the bank's radio program, Leaders of Tomorrow, over the Columbia Don Lee System.

Dr. Kreps believes that the businessman of 1964 will have an enlarged viewpoint, able to judge conditions from a national outlook rather than from a purely local aspect.

By 1964, contrary to the beliefs of many, Dr. Kreps contends there will be greater opportunity for the young man starting from scratch than exists today. The custom of passing business enterprises from father to son, by that time, will have been relegated to the dark ages. Entrance into business will then be on the same basis as entrance into medicine or any of the other professions through training in recognized schools. The boy or girl, through this means, will be able to learn whether or not he prefers a particular business and we will have fewer "misfits" than we have today.

By 1964, we are bound to have a national banking system, that will replace all state systems. Branch banking will be nation wide. Dr. Kreps believes that banking will be the first of our business institutions to become professional through special schools which will train the young men before they are allowed to enter this highly specialized field.

LIEUT. BERT A. ALLEN

POST No. 2415

AND AUXILIARY

By H. R. Dick

"Our God and soldier,
We alike adore,
When at the brink of ruin,
But not before."

Memorial Day..... On this day the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States ask Americans everywhere, as a united people, to offer their proud and reverent homage to their glorious soldier dead, those gallant heroes who died that Liberty might live. On this day they ask all citizens to wear the poppy of remembrance, the V.F.W. buddy poppy. Communists..... These rats will creep in where angels fear to tread. One of our own men has been struck down in the public street by these agitators. I believe in a fair scale of wages for all workers, but in their strikes I do not believe in mob violence. All terms can be met peacefully—there need be no rioting. Mob violence is the work of communists. I think that it is about time that our police officials began their fight against these vermin in a serious manner. I suggest as one of their first moves—Stop the public meetings which these skunks hold under the guise of "Lectures on Russia."

Parade..... The Veterans' organizations of the City of San Diego are to observe Memorial day, May 30th, with their usual parade and Memorial exercises at the John D. Spreckels organ in Balboa park. All service and ex-service organizations are urged to join with this group.

Bennington cemetery..... The memorial services will be conducted at the cemetery on Memorial day under the auspices of the Lt. Bert A. Allen post. The committee in charge of these services reports all plans are near completion and the exercises are to be the best ever staged by our post. The public is cordially invited to attend. Further details will be announced in this column at a later date.

Ladies auxiliary..... Through the eyes of yours truly, it seems that our ladies are making an up and coming organization out of their group. The attendance at their meetings, the co-operation and understanding which these ladies know is most noteworthy. Election..... The chair of junior vice commander was declared vacant at our last regular meeting, and all comrades are hereby notified that nomination and election will be held at our next meeting to fill this vacancy.

Progress..... That is just what is being made in our post. We are having some fine turn-outs to our meetings with all members taking an active part and interest in the affairs and doings. New members are making application for membership and others are transferring to our ranks. That's what I like to see. We are getting somewhere—we have a definite goal—we are working to reach it—and others are joining in to help. Let's see more new faces in the ranks the more the better—Bring in a new member!

The ladies auxiliary will hold their social meeting in the ladies club rooms shortly after the unit holds their short business meeting. The meeting is Thursday, May 24th. All members of the auxiliary are urged to attend.

And so until next Friday—Yet ere we part, one lesson I can leave—Do noble things, not dream them!

Strong men have strong features. A dolls features indicate a doll's mind.

LIEUT. AND MRS. J. L. CARTER MOVE TO SAN DIEGO

First Lieutenant J. L. Carter, British Engineer Corps, retired, and Mrs. Carter of West Point Loma Boulevard have recently taken a large house on First avenue, San Diego.

They say their many activities demand a city residence. Mrs. Carter has recently accepted the appointment of State Chairman of the National Astrologians, Association of America, which is affiliated with the Astro-Pathological Academy of Newark, N. J., and has a federal charter.

The Carters are also active workers for EPIC, or Sinclair for Governor of California. Mr. and Mrs. Carter have also been appointed circulators of the sales tax repeal petition.

Residents of San Diego in 1918 will remember Lieut. Carter as a speaker for the State Council of Defense.

"Franz!" some one said in a thick, unnatural voice, and he realized that he himself had spoken the name. "Franz, I'll . . . I'll let you go if you'll give her back!"

"Yes," a voice answered. Not Franz's voice; that other voice. "Yes, I'm back. It's all right. I'm here. What is it?"

He found himself staring into that face, a face now bathed in the soft warm light of a snapping fire.

"Oh," he said and closed his eyes and smiled. So she was all right, then. "All . . . right," he whispered.

Then something was pressed to his lips.

"It is hot," a voice said. That must be Mary's voice. Where did she come from? . . . A hand raised his head gently and he felt strong coffee scorch his lips. He sipped obediently and dropped back. This was strange. . . . He was alone with two girls, and had a job before him. . . . A man with things he must do who can't remember what they are can't be alone with women. . . .

He stirred, trying to sit up, and Kate's voice begged him to lie quiet.

"All right," he murmured. If she wanted that, then that was what she would have. . . . Lord, but she was lovely to look upon!

So it came to be dawn before he looked about him with clear consciousness. At his feet sat Mary, her eyes fast on him.

"Hullo," he said.

Mary gestured for caution, finger at her lips, and tilted her head toward the sleeper.

"Your sister," she said, leaning close. "She's tired."

"Sister? What's that?"

Kate roused, her movement cutting off his words.

"Oh!" she gasped as she saw the clarity in his countenance. "Oh, how do you feel? Are you stronger, now?"

"Strong? Not very," he smiled slightly. "But what's all the fuss? What went on? How'd we all—"

"Oh, God!" he moaned as memory of what had happened and what might yet happen flooded back. "What day's this?"

"It doesn't matter," Kate said soothingly, coming close to him. "So long as you're feeling better, it doesn't matter—"

"Matter? Of course, it matters. Think! What has happened. . . . I got in Tuesday and all day yesterday—"

"That's it! I remember, now. . . . All right, if you say so I won't sit up. But listen, I'm giddy as the devil. Things are going round outside but I'm thinking straight. Today at four o'clock that money's got to be in MacDonald's hands or Polaris is sunk. I remember, now. . . . Franz nicked me with a knife. D' I stay out all this time? Whew! Say, we've got to snap into it!"

"But you mustn't think of things like that," Kate protested as one would talk to a petulant child. "It makes no difference what happens to Polaris until you're all right."

"Me!" he scoffed feebly. "I'm all right except for being helpless. I must've lost a lot of blood. I'm weak as . . . as something. But I guess I got weak trying to arrange things for you. I can't fall down on the job with the finish in sight. Where are the boys?"

"I haven't seen a soul except Mary, here, since you overtook Franz and me yesterday morning," said Kate. Steve groaned.

"I sent word. Something slipped. . . . I wonder . . ." He shut his eyes tightly and, opening them, stared at the Indian girl a long interval.

"Mary, you ever been through the country between here and MacDonald's?"

"Oh, yes," idly.

"How long would it take you to get there?"

"Long ways. May-be all day."

"I'd take you more than all day to go by canoe, that's certain. Listen, Mary, once you wanted to do something for me and were honest about it. Well, now's your chance. There's something I've got to have done today that's more important than anything I've ever tried to do in my life. . . . Except one thing, of course—" with a grave smile at Kate. "Understand that? Good."

"I've got something to send to MacDonald. Will you take a package to him across country and get there before four o'clock today?"

The girl squinted at the sun and shrugged slightly.

"May-be, I go fast all time."

He tried to move and turned his face helplessly to Kate.

"I'm stiff as a board. In my hip pocket is a note-book and pencil. No. . . . Other one. . . . Yes, that's it. Now, write out a receipt for the Laird to sign. That option's binding. All we've got to do is fulfill its terms. Get the dates straight in your head, and make the receipt an acknowledgment of the initial payment on the option recorded in this county as of such-and-such a date. Good, now!"—as the girl began to write.

After a moment she read it to him; he suggested a change and then gave the document his approval.

"That'll hold him," he said excitedly, color beginning to stain his cheeks. "Now, where's the brief case? Used it for a pillow, eh? Good!" he grinned. "But you can trust Mary."

He shifted his gaze to the waiting Indian girl.

"You get to MacDonald's before four o'clock this afternoon. You give the bag to him and tell him to write his name on this paper. Then you take the paper to headquarters and give it to . . . to Mrs. LaFane. She'll be there, surely. You wait for me there and you'll have your reward or the stars'll fall!"

"Sure, Yo'ng Jim. . . . Good-by," she said, and tucking the receipt into her blouse, took the brief case and turned to her canoe.

Steve was in a sweat by that time. Every pore seemed to be open, letting his meager store of strength gush from his weary body. He breathed quickly and shielded his eyes from the brilliant sunlight.

"No good!" he whispered after a moment. "I'm all in. . . . But she'll get there. I'd bet on that girl . . ."

"Don't talk, please," urged Kate, drawing the blankets about his shoulders. "It's nothing to worry about. Compared to other things that have happened it's a detail."

She rose and went to the fire.

"Here's a broth made of smoked meat and meal," she said. "Take it now, and then more coffee. Mary said it was the thing to do. She knows. I felt so helpless. . . ."

Obediently he sipped from the cups she held for him, his head held against her side, and after that he slept for a time. It was a deep sleep. He was conscious of the girl's presence all the time and when he finally roused she was standing under the fly looking down at him. He smiled weakly.

"More to eat?"

"If it's from your hand," he answered.

He was definitely better by then, but still events and people were tangled in his mind.

"Things are all jimmied up," he confessed. "Of course, I remember getting shot at. Was that right here? Was, eh? . . . And I recall about Franz trying to get away and knifing me and then drowning. But after that it's . . . it's kind of like a photograph out of focus. Fuzzy. How'd Mary get here, for instance?"

The girl sat cross-legged beside him and told all that had transpired during his period of unconsciousness.

"And you all alone!" he murmured. "Holding my life inside my body with your hands." He looked at her hands.

"They're so small," he said. "I . . . I've wondered about your hands. I . . . I've wondered a lot about you. Why, a girl like you all alone and thinking you had a dying stranger along!"

"Not a stranger," she said gently. "It was hard, but chiefly because I felt I owed so much to you."

He experienced an odd embarrassment at such pointedly personal talk. He was not strong enough for that yet, he found.

"Nobody showed up. I'll bet they went down river. I was so . . . so up in the air that I never left any warning at the landing."

She told him of her futile attempts to send up smokes.

"Rain, eh? That explains it! Chances are some of 'em went right by us yesterday and never guessed we were so near. It's clear as a bell now and there's no wind. Hadn't we better try the smoke signal again?"

"Certainly! I'll get the fires going, now."

"Wish I could help. You're no girl to be lugging fire wood for a big hulk like me."

"If you never help another person in all your life, and if you live to be older than the hills, you've done your share," she said soberly and turned away to gather wood and hide the emotion in her eyes.

When the fires were going she returned to his side. For an interval

"Those," He Said, "Are the Sweetest Words I've Ever Heard."

she spoke no word and then, when he smiled inquiringly, she asked:

"Who are you?"

"I'm Steve Drake. I knew your dad when I was a kid. . . . Kind of a rotten deal, pulling wool over your eyes the way I did. But . . . I'll tell you how it was."

He went back to that day when Old Jim Flynn saved him and his father from perishing in a blizzard. He told it all, just as it had happened, from that time on. Kate did not interrupt. When he spoke of Franz, she lost color; when he told of his maneuvering with the Laird her lips parted in eagerness; when he narrated how LaFane had handled Young Jim tears came into her eyes.

Breaks marked the story, of course; twice she made him stop and sip food and stimulant.

"You're still weak," she said. "May-be you're weaker than I think. Oh, some one must come before long!"

"Well, that's it," he finally ended. "I've been an imposter, but it seemed to be the only way. If you'd have known about the kid before he got straightened out, you'd have been frantic; if the men realized I was a stranger, they never would have stuck to the job. Now, if Mary gets to the Laird's on time, we're set. If not . . ."

"If not, then it never can be said that a brave fight wasn't made! I . . . What can I say to you, Steve Drake? Words are so empty. All I can say, I guess, is to echo the words of Mary Wolf: You are my friend."

"Those," he said, "are the sweetest words I've ever heard."

She surrendered her hand when he reached for it and he gripped it close.

CHAPTER XIV

It was Young Jim himself who sighted the three smokes. He and McNally hastened toward the island and within minutes of their arrival the older man was on his way down the lake with plenty of orders for the detachment of men he would surely find there.

"Doctor!" Steve snorted when Kate gave her first instruction. "I should say not! Why, I'll be good as new tomorrow. I'll take it easy and go out with the boys."

He would do no such thing, Kate insisted firmly. He would stay in this very spot until a doctor gave him permission to move.

And so a larger tent was brought in before night and more blankets and an abundance of food. Young Jim and Kate stayed with him and between Steve's rest periods the talk flowed almost constantly.

Late the next day the doctor appeared. He looked Steve over carefully, re-dressed the wound and questioned and prodded.

"In a day or two," he said. "You keep quiet here for a day or two and then you can go out safely."

"Good Lord! You mean I've got to be babied and waited on when I feel fit as a fiddle?"

"Safer that way," the doctor asserted.

LaFane stepped close to the bed, then. He had brought the doctor and carried news of Mary as well. She had made the trip through the timber successfully and with half an hour to spare had reached MacDonald's. The old Scot, having no other course, had signed the receipt and accepted the money.

"But he didn't want to do it," LaFane added. "He's pretty mad. He says you're a good fisherman and a good liar. If Mary hadn't gotten there on time he'd never have gone through with the deal."

"I'll have to make my peace with him when I'm permitted to do as I please again! He's a nice old coddler and I'd hate to leave the country with him feeling this way."

LaFane and the doctor moved down to the beach, leaving Young Jim and Kate in Steve's tent.

"Leave the country?" the girl asked. "What do you mean by that?"

Her brother looked sharply at her, catching a repressed quality in the tone.

"Why, what'd I stay here for?" Steve countered. "The actual, real, certified Young Jim's all set to go. I don't aim to stick around here and ask the flyns to make room for me."

"Ask them?" she cried. "Why . . . when . . . Don't you see . . ."

Her voice choked up and her eyes misted.

Steve looked at Young Jim and at the girl, and then turned his head away.

"Gosh," the boy said, "we'll be needing you, now that it's going to be such a whale of an operation. That is, if we could get you to stay."

"Well, that's fine of you. . . . I haven't anything in particular to do. There are things . . . reasons . . . that is—"

He cleared his throat as he felt color mounting into his cheeks.

"What I'm trying to say is this: If you've a job of work that I can do I sure'll welcome a chance at it."

"Oh, yes; there'll be work, all right," said Kate as if her mind were on other matters. "Besides . . . you see . . ."

She, in her turn, was stammering and Young Jim, uncoiling his long legs, grinned as he rose.

"Where you going?" Steve asked. "Mostly out of the way until you two can say some of the things that seem to be on your minds," he chuckled.

Holidays Observed

Holidays which are observed in every state in the Union are: New Year's day, Washington's birthday, July Fourth, Labor day, Thanksgiving day and Christmas day. These are legal or public holidays, made so by acts of legislatures in the states, by acts of congress for the District of Columbia, or by proclamation of the President. The United States congress has not the power to decide for the states the observance of any day as a national holiday.

The Home Aquarium

How Toy Fishes Arrive From Germany.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

FISH aquariums in American homes, once inhabited only by goldfish, now are stocked with finny creatures of strange colors and shapes from many parts of the world. The toy fish merchant has enlarged his stock to include fish from far distant waters, and aquariums are about as common in American living rooms today as potted plants.

Who started the fad of aquarium fish is a bit of a mystery. Rumor names Egypt; but although the fresh waters of Egypt are replete with curious and beautiful dwarf fishes and the Egyptians developed the art of glass-blowing during the Ptolemaic and Roman periods, after 300 B. C., there is no evidence that vessels of glass were used for aquaria.

It is well known that the lure of breeding fishes in captivity took possession of the Chinese several hundred years ago, spreading to Japan, and thence over the western world, with the goldfish as its original object of interest. During the past 75 years, experimentation with the balanced aquarium has passed through various salt and fresh-water phases until, with tropical toy fishes, it has reached the peak of enthusiasm and success in Europe and America.

Not that the goldfish has suffered a loss of popularity. Many millions still are reared annually in the United States, largely for martyrdom in the quart globe, and there is little diminution in the demand for bizarre and costly varieties. Among cold-water species it has no rivals.

Nevertheless, tropical fishes have superseded goldfishes in many of the smaller hatcheries, and some of the larger goldfish farms have built conservatories for rearing them.

Many shops in the larger cities are devoted exclusively to their sale, and a pet show without a display of the colorful midgets would be noticeably incomplete. But it is true, also, that, while most American and European homes have been ornamented at some time by the presence of a few goldfishes, the majority have not as yet succumbed to the allurements of the toy tropical, though fish "fans" spring up daily like mushrooms, enticed by the flash of color, the beauty of fin and form, the remarkable breeding habits undisturbed by captivity, and the ease with which the aquaria are maintained.

From All Over World.

Many kinds imported into the United States are sold and shipped almost the length and breadth of North America—from Florida to Canada and from Massachusetts to California—but hundreds equally beautiful and interesting are as yet unknown to the fancier.

The happy hunting grounds for toy fishes, explored and unexplored, range in the western hemisphere from the Carolinas south through Florida, and from Mexico through Central America, Panama and South America to the most southerly point of Argentina. In the eastern hemisphere, Egypt, and other parts of Africa, Australia and Asia—including the island groups of the Malay Archipelago, India, China, Siam and other countries—have been drawn upon for the supply of dwarf fishes appearing in the home aquaria of the Occident.

Their habitat is chiefly the swamp, the ditch, the rain pool, the rice field, clear mountain streams and stagnant lowland waters, ponds, brooks, lakes, rivers and estuaries; but some either make migrations to the coasts or live perennially in brackish or wholly salt water. Oceanic species thus far kept in American aquaria have been principally gobies.

Tropical toy fishes are of many genera and species and even of many varieties—some natural, others cultivated. Their adult body length measures from 1 inch to 5 inches.

The anatomy of the toy fish is not unique. Swim bladders and other organs common to larger fishes are common to them, and their fins are the same—caudal, or tail, fins for swimming and propelling, fins beneath, called ventral and anal, and pectorals (behind the gills) for helping maintain the equilibrium; also, dorsal fins (on the back), which indicate moods and physical states—health and contentment when erect, illness and depression when lowered. The majority have no sort of protection against enemies except in such teeth as they may possess.

Some are so peaceable that a number of species live amicably in one tank; others so quarrelsome that two males cannot occupy the same aquarium, and a male may kill his mate.

Some subsist largely on algae, but most favor small water animals, such as entomostracans (the minute crustaceans), annelids, and insect larvae.

Raw beef, cereals, roe, and shellfish, also dried shrimp and other desiccated foods, appear on their bill of fare, and many experiments have been made with concentrated foods, such as cod-liver meal and other glandular products, to ascertain their response to vitamin nutritives—experiments which have confirmed their amenability to a foreign diet and especially to substitutes for the lime, minerals, enzymes and other catalytic agents present in live food, which aid digestion, purify the blood, and keep the skin lustrous.

Mouth of Fish Incubator.

The majority lay eggs and leave them to their fate, but some carry their eggs in their mouths, taking no food while incubation is in progress, and subsequently caring for the young, which swim back into the mouth at the approach of danger.

Some build nests and vigilantly guard the eggs and fry; others bring forth their young alive.

Nearly always when the fry receive any care it is given by the father, but in mouth-breeding species it is usually the mother who gathers up the spawn, and among Cichlids, which include the Brazilian half-moon and Mesonauta, both sexes guard the eggs and fry.

In yet another species, the Chanchito, the eggs are hatched in a nest scooped in the sand by the male fish. When able to swim, the young rise and school, the mother leading the procession, the father bringing up the rear.

Hazards of Tropicals.

The only martyrdom to which the tropicals are subjected is accidental. Some expire from the cold. Occasionally an aquarium is left uncovered and the fishes, many species of which leap like salmon, clear the rim with one jump and dry up on the floor; or an aquarist concerned for their comfort may transfer their tank to a radiator and forget it until they are completely cooked.

Exportations of toy fishes from Germany into the United States began nearly 30 years ago, numerous species having been first successfully bred in that country from parent stock captured in its tropical haunts. Though many thousands now are propagated elsewhere, a large percentage of those owned in the United States being "home grown," considerable numbers still are shipped from Germany and South America.

The typical German traveling can is of tin, with a capacity of about four gallons, heavily insulated with felt wadding and paper and with an opening in the cover to admit air. Thousands of specimens have traveled safely across the ocean and into the interior of the United States in these cans, most of the shipping being done between May and October. For conveying by hand or shipping specimens shorter distances, one-gallon thermos jars are used.

Europe boasts permanent and notable exhibits of toy fishes in half a dozen of its public aquariums—those of London, Amsterdam, Antwerp, Berlin, Frankfurt and Leipzig. The United States lays claim to two. That of the Lincoln park aquarium, in Chicago, consists of 58 tanks, showing many brilliant species from the Orient and South America. That of the Steinhart aquarium, in San Francisco, consists of 31 tanks of similar species and, in addition, many brought from Samoa and Hawaii, which display the vivid colors and the fantastic shapes that characterize the fishes of those waters today.

The new John G. Shedd aquarium, in Chicago, displays 65 balanced aquaria in a tropical-fish room maintained at a temperature of 80 degrees Fahrenheit, stressing beautiful setting and plant life rather than the rarity of the collection.

OLD WORD "TORY" BACK ONCE MORE; LONG IN DISUSE

"Tory" persists like a word that answers a human need. Four times in four centuries it has lapsed from usage only to be revived. From Ireland it crossed to Scotland, migrated to England, voyaged to America to have a part in opposing the revolt of the colonies, vanished with the withdrawal or deportation of Tories and the end of royalism. "All the people were now Whigs." In this country the term Tory remained simply as history. Not till the advent of the New Deal and NIRA did it reappear, in political discussion.

Much of past struggle is wrapped up in the name "Tory." Originally old Irish (torladhe), it referred to the hunted outlaws of the bogs. Elizabethans applied it to the dispossessed natives in Ireland who harassed the English settlers on seized lands. Transferred to England, it was derisively applied by the Roundheads to the Cavaliers, who nicknamed their opponents Whigs.

In America a redivision of parties occurred at the Constitutional convention. The most constant difference was between those who wished a "national" government as against a "confederate" government, those who thought power should be derived from the states as such, and those who insisted it must come from the people. The first Whig party was formed in 1834 from a fusion of National Republicans and others to oppose the Democrats.—New York Times.

Great City's Decline

Medinaceli, Spain, once a prosperous city of 15,000 inhabitants, is slowly decreasing in size and, it is now feared, will disappear within a few years. Recent visitors report that the population, which was 5,000 only 40 years ago, is now barely 700. At the beginning of the Sixteenth century Medinaceli was a splendid Castilian metropolis, a coveted Moorish stronghold and the key of the province of Aragon. Weavers filled the streets after the day's work and proud aristocrats strolled past grilles windows through which beaming black eyes gleamed at them. When the dukes and their families, who lived in splendor, passed away, others lost their livelihood and started the exodus.

DISAPPEARING TRICK

At a party a necklace a woman was wearing was much admired. She took it off to show it better and it was passed from hand to hand. La-

"The joke has gone far enough," said the host. "I'll put this silver

GRASPING THE CHANCES

A countrywoman arrived at a London station, and one of the first things she saw was a man setting off pigeons in a race.

For some moments she stood fascinated as the man opened the crates and liberated the birds.

Suddenly an idea came to her. She rushed up to the man.

"I say, mister," she said, "you might give me one of these birds for my little Johnny before you throw them all away."

Promptly the voice at the other end of the wire replied:
"Well, I'm the son, and I don't want my mother to start me taking

Betty Spencer 5A absent because of pink eye. All friends hope she will soon return.

The high 4th grade held a very interesting civic league meeting Wednesday. Safety was the subject stressed.

The low third grade is beginning the study of Mexico. We hope to make our pueblo into a Mexican house. The boys and girls plan to make Mexican pottery. We are writing Mexican stories for our Mexican books.

The high third grade has received no honors this week. They have won the bank banner for the second week. They also won a beautiful begonia which was given by the Woman's club for the best floral display.

Sixth grade base ball team defeated the Cabrillo team 25-9 in the Ocean Beach diamond, May 9th. Ray Malcomb and Olie Matheus had the Cabrillo boys' completely at their mercy. Winford Plant's home run was one of the interesting moments in the game. Ocean Beach plays Pacific Beach May 15, at Ocean Beach.

The high fifth grade won the first prize of $1 for displays entered in the garden show. They wish to thank the givers of the prize.

FORTY PERCENT OF COUNTY TAXPAYERS PAY NINETY PER CENT OF LOCAL TAX LEVY

Real estate taxpayers are in the minority, being only 40% of the total according to a study of property declarations taken by County Assessor James Hervey Johnson. Out of 53,595 declarations of property made by taxpayers to date, only 20,826 were made by the owners of real property. Following is the segregation:

Real estate property owners 20,826
Personal property only 21,665
Veterans' exemption claims 9,503
Stocks and bonds only 1,601
Total: 53,595

With the assessment period half completed, more than 50,000 property declarations will be made to the assessor's office before July 1.

Many of the statements made by owners of personal property only, cover a full exemption of the personal property, upon which a householder's exemption has been allowed.

While only 40% of the taxpayers own real estate, they pay 90% of the local property tax. The ratio being personal property assessed $16,000,000 (in round numbers) and $134,000,000 real estate assessed.

All declarations must be in before the first of July, as required by law. No church, veteran's, or householder's exemption can be allowed unless filed before that time.
